

The ACF can trace its beginnings to 1859 when there was a threat of invasion by the French.

In 1860 at least eight schools had formed Volunteer companies for their senior boys and masters, and a number of volunteer units had started their own cadet companies.

Typical of these were the Queen's Westminster's who placed their 35 Cadets at their head when they marched past Queen Victoria at her Hyde Park Review of the Volunteers in 1860.

Miss Octavia Hill ... was certainly not a militarist. She formed the Southwark Cadet Company in order to introduce the boys of the slums of that area to the virtues of order, cleanliness, teamwork and self-reliance.

After the conversion of the volunteers to the Territorial Army (TA) by Lord Haldane in 1908, public schools and Universities were asked to produce units of the Officers Training Corps, and other Cadets Corps were formed into school units and open units for boys who had left school.

In the First World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place and the War office reassumed responsibility for its administration up until 1923 when the Territorial Associations again took over.

In 1930 the Government ceased to recognise the Cadet Force and withdrew financial support from it.

During the Second World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place in January 1942. The War Office took over the organisation.

The BNCA became the Army Cadet Force Association (ACFA) in 1945 and continues to be responsible for those aspects of cadet training and activities.

The Cadet Training Centre at Frimley Park, Surrey was opened in 1959. This centre provides courses for officers and adult instructors of the ACF and the CCF and also leadership courses in the summer for a limited number of senior Cadets.

The centenary of the ACF was celebrated in 1960.

Recent changes in the ACF have resulted in the provision of a more modern and workmanlike uniform and the introduction of the Army Proficiency Certificate (APC)

There are about 4,000 Cadets in some 1,600 detachments, which are to be found in every part of the United Kingdom.

The ACF can trace its beginnings to 1859 when there was a threat of invasion by the French.

In 1860 at least eight schools had formed Volunteer companies for their senior boys and masters, and a number of volunteer units had started their own cadet companies.

Typical of these were the Queen's Westminster's who placed their 35 Cadets at their head when they marched past Queen Victoria at her Hyde Park Review of the Volunteers in 1860.

Miss Octavia Hill ... was certainly not a militarist. She formed the Southwark Cadet Company in order to introduce the boys of the slums of that area to the virtues of order, cleanliness, teamwork and self-reliance.

After the conversion of the volunteers to the Territorial Army (TA) by Lord Haldane in 1908, public schools and Universities were asked to produce units of the Officers Training Corps, and other Cadets Corps were formed into school units and open units for boys who had left school.

In the First World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place and the War office reassumed responsibility for its administration up until 1923 when the Territorial Associations again took over.

In 1930 the Government ceased to recognise the Cadet Force and withdrew financial support from it.

During the Second World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place in January 1942. The War Office took over the organisation.

The BNCA became the Army Cadet Force Association (ACFA) in 1945 and continues to be responsible for those aspects of cadet training and activities.

The Cadet Training Centre at Frimley Park, Surrey was opened in 1959. This centre provides courses for officers and adult instructors of the ACF and the CCF and also leadership courses in the summer for a limited number of senior Cadets.

The centenary of the ACF was celebrated in 1960.

Recent changes in the ACF have resulted in the provision of a more modern and workmanlike uniform and the introduction of the Army Proficiency Certificate (APC)

There are about 4,000 Cadets in some 1,600 detachments, which are to be found in every part of the United Kingdom.

1859

1860

1860

1908

1923

1930

1942

1945

1959

1960

The ACF can trace its beginnings to ???? when there was a threat of invasion by the French.

In ???? at least eight schools had formed Volunteer companies for their senior boys and masters, and a number of volunteer units had started their own cadet companies.

Typical of these were the Queen's Westminster's who placed their 35 Cadets at their head when they marched past Queen Victoria at her Hyde Park Review of the Volunteers in **????.

After the conversion of the volunteers to the Territorial Army (TA) by Lord Haldane in ????, public schools and Universities were asked to produce units of the Officers Training Corps, and other Cadets Corps were formed into school units and open units for boys who had left school.

In the First World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place and the War office reassumed responsibility for its administration up until ???? when the Territorial Associations again took over.

In ???? the Government ceased to recognise the Cadet Force and withdrew financial support from it.

During the Second World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place in January ????. The War Office took over the organisation.

The BNCA became the Army Cadet Force Association (ACFA) in ???? and continues to be responsible for those aspects of cadet training and activities.

The Cadet Training Centre at Frimley Park, Surrey was opened in ????. This centre provides courses for officers and adult instructors of the ACF and the CCF and also leadership courses in the summer for a limited number of senior Cadets.

The centenary of the ACF was celebrated in **????.

1859	The ACF can trace its beginnings to ???? when there was a threat of invasion by the French.
1860	In ???? at least eight schools had formed Volunteer companies for their senior boys and masters, and a number of volunteer units had started their own cadet companies.
1860	Typical of these were the Queen's Westminster's who placed their 35 Cadets at their head when they marched past Queen Victoria at her Hyde Park Review of the Volunteers in ???? .
1908	After the conversion of the volunteers to the Territorial Army (TA) by Lord Haldane in ???? , public schools and Universities were asked to produce units of the Officers Training Corps, and other Cadets Corps were formed into school units and open units for boys who had left school.
1923	In the First World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place and the War office reassumed responsibility for its administration up until ???? when the Territorial Associations again took over.
1930	In ???? the Government ceased to recognise the Cadet Force and withdrew financial support from it.
1942	During the Second World War a big expansion of the Cadet Force took place in January ???? . The War Office took over the organisation.
1945	The BNCA became the Army Cadet Force Association (ACFA) in ???? and continues to be responsible for those aspects of cadet training and activities.
1959	The Cadet Training Centre at Frimley Park, Surrey was opened in ???? . This centre provides courses for officers and adult instructors of the ACF and the CCF and also leadership courses in the summer for a limited number of senior Cadets.
1960	The centenary of the ACF was celebrated in ???? .